Continuation of 11. does NOT place the application in condition for allowance because: Applicant has taken exception to the use of industry white paper publications as prior art as publication data is not immediately apparent. However, please see attached search for verification of date, as the white page publication was removed through archive channels. Applicant further states that the billing records of the cited art fails to teach the recited "accounts receivable". Examiner notes that the specifications do not support a distinction, as accounts receivable is simple disclosed as a ledger item. Further Applicant has stated that the cited "reversing records" are not taught by associating records with stored reversing records, but that the term "reversing" is used as an adjective, but as a verb. Examiner fails to see how this interpretation is enabled. In conclusion, Examiner appreciates amendments to overcome claim objection, and these amendments are entered into the record .
